Advance Budgeting and Forecasting Training Course

Introduction

Financial planning involves raising and allocating funds based on the overall business strategy. The starting point for this process is the organization’s Mission/Vision Statements. Effective financial planning is essential for an organization's financial viability. Budgeting is a critical aspect of this process, requiring annual preparation and quarterly reviews. It should include sales forecasts, cost of sales, operating overheads, and capital expenditure plans. Financial reports provide deep insights into a company’s financial health, aiding in future planning and decision-making. This course will empower senior executives to understand budget statements, measure performance, and make informed decisions.
