Coaching Skills for Managers and Supervisors Training Course

Introduction

The implementation of effective coaching programs can unlock the potential of employees, improve motivation levels, and, if done right, be far more beneficial than any other form of training and development methods.

When the stress is on to meet targets and managers are hurried to meet deadlines, coaching is usually the first task to get dropped from their team development activities. However, it is now being increasingly accepted that corporate coaching programs are essential in the development of successful teams.

What will the participants of this “Coaching Skills for Managers and Supervisors Training Course” learn? This course will inculcate its partakers with the self-confidence, proficiencies, and methods to conduct coaching efficiently.

As a participant in the course, they will study the difference between coaching and mentoring in an in-depth manner, and also learn about the various other types of people-development models out there.

They will also be taught how to ensure that the correct coaching method is applied to each situation. Delegates will learn about coaching models as well as the directive and non-directive approach to coaching.

Attendees will also acquire knowledge in influential questioning techniques and how to give valuable feedback. Utilizing a blend of instruction, demonstration and feedback, this training program provides participants with the opportunity to also practice the skills learned.

This Xcelerate Training Institute course will empower you with the knowledge and practical skills in employing powerful coaching tools for leaders at all levels. It will also help you to access and align your teams’ personal experiences, traits, and skills better in line with the common goals of the organization.
