Retirement Planning for Public and Civil Service Training Course

Introduction

Introduction

Retirement Planning is a process of setting income goals for and after retirement and the essential measures and decisions to be taken. Retirement planning involves identifying the source of income, estimating expenditure, executing the saving plan, and managing of risks and assets.

Retirement planning implies to saving and managing finances strategically, investment, and in the long run the allocation of money to support through retirement. It is a lifelong process. One can start planning for retirement at any time, however, it best suits to start from the beginning.

It considers not only assets and take-home pay but also future expenditures, responsibilities, and life expectations. It helps envisage the future when remunerated employment ends, be it lifestyle choices, the decision about where to live, when to quit working completely without hampering living, and depending on others for meeting ends.

Retirement can be both exciting and exhausting, creating new challenges, experiences, and uncertainties. It is important to take necessary decisions during one’s active working life. It’s about how far and clear can you see? And stick to a plan that makes living dignified and comfortable after retirement.
